Halloween switch

From Keith White, Los Angeles Region—These pictures were taken at a recent Los Angeles Region Halloween party called the "Witches Brew."

As you can see, we reversed the usual procedure and the Porsche's wore the costumes. Prizes were given for the best costumes with "Bugs Bunny" owned by Dale Boyd taking first place and "The Ghoul" owned by Chuck Fraser winning second.

All cars entered reflected great imagination and hours of planning and hard work.

"Bugs Bunny" was equipped with a shortwave radio and conversed fluently with all who stopped for conversation. This was accomplished with a walkie talkie tuned to the radio channel; quite effective and especially to non believers.

Like to get more power, trade annoying exhaust vibration and noise for a smooth, powerful tone, and lessen engine wear by relieving back pressure? You can do all this and more with the Bursch Tuned Exhaust System. In tests on Normal, Super, S90, and modified engines, and VW's, the Bursch installation resulted in horsepower increases of up to 10% at the rear wheels. The Bursch Exhaust Header System is built for both Porsche and VW in two types: The competition/Street model (shown above) which features a flanged detachable muffler and a straight pipe for racing or competitive club events, and a Street model which has a permanently attached muffler.
